District Attorney Whitman led the republican gubernatorial race with $1,417 votes in 1,298 districts, 1,459 of which were in New York city, while Hedges ran second with 10,109 and Hinman third with 6,723.

Davenport had 3,422 votes to Sulzer's 3,138 in 1,010 districts, 320 of which were in New York city.

Out of 773 districts, 700 of which were in New York city, Gerard had 35,169 votes to Roosevelt's 9,027 and McDonough's 2,607.

Caider had almost three times as man votes as his nearest opponent, Wadsworth, in the republican senatorship race. Eight hundred and ninety-six districts gave Calder 18,223; Wadsworth 6,337 and Hill 3,218. An estimate from Albany county was that Wadsworth would gain 7,500 votes on Calder there. William Barnes, whose hope is in Albany, supported Wadsworth.
